

There's No Place Like Home

The way we age is changing. At one time, many seniors would choose to leave their homes and join an independent or assisted living community to live out their lives. With the shift in the economy, this option has become increasingly more difficult, and many aging adults are choosing to remain at home. With "aging in place" a growing trend, finding solutions that meet the individual needs of our older population is more important now than ever before.

For Cypress HomeCare Solutions, successful aging comes from compassionate and solutions-driven care that empowers individuals to remain as independent as possible as they age. To meet the needs of those aging in place, care plans and services have been created and enhanced in recent years. Meal delivery, mobile doctors and transportation services are just a few of the solutions older adults can use as they remain at home. In addition, the growth of home care, home health and hospice services are allowing our aging loved ones to stay in their most comfortable setting through the end of their lives.

Another aspect that is essential to an adult's successful aging is recognizing that we must care for both the individuals and their loved ones. Cypress HomeCare Solutions grew from the personal caregiving experience of the Roth family, who cared for their ailing mother and wife at the end of her life. This experience inspired the family to assist other individuals and families in the community by providing compassionate care at home. By supporting families through respite care services, we recognize the efforts of the family caregiver.

Aging in place, for now, is here to stay, and Cypress knows what it takes to assist your aging loved ones in remaining independent at home. Call us today at 602-264-8009 so we may help you find the best possible solution.

Bob Roth, Managing Partner

Advertorial content provided by Cypress HomeCare Solutions